

My Response to the Reading of The Boom in the "Calaveras Clarion"

In this short story, the author uses a lot of words with different meanings. It is one of the most important techniques in the story. Actually, it is one of the most memorable techniques in the story. However, there are many literary techniques in the story.

It's interesting to notice the words that are confusing because being confusing is funny. The most important confusing word is the word ignominious. It is changed several times, and these changes are important to the plot.

The most important people in the story are Mr. Dimmdge, Mrs. Dimmdge, the temporary editor. The plot begins with choosing vowels. The plot ends with an indication that these choices brought the couple back together. The main purpose of the plot is humor.

The most important is also distance because she moved away by admission back to her parents'. This distance is further exemplified by the blue jay. And the blue jay's next building is significant.

Towards the end, she said, "I found out from that 'Person' you showed me that jealousy loved me all the time." This is a very significant plot point because in some ways it is the climax, that is, the nadir, of the story of which this example is short.

The author of The Boom in the "Calaveras Clarion" is Brent Heart, and 18th-century writer who is memorialized. Because of his excellent skills.

When the word ingenuous was changed to ignominious, there was a predestinated conflict between the foreman, the newspaper editor, and Lizy Jane, who, in her own words, was "actooally jealous," which was the climax of this still-remembered piece of English literature.
